THE LITTLE NUGGET By P. G. Wodehouse

An Ideal Summer Story Full of Laughs and Thrills—The Adventures of a Human "Gold Mine."

WILL BEGIN

behind the operating chair. I heard a shot, and Mrs. Bailey said in an easy sort of tone, "Oh, doctor, I'm shot!" I said, "Oh, pshaw, you're not shot!" She fell. Those were the only words she uttered."

Dr. Carman said that he loosened Mrs. Bailey's clothing, opened the door and called Post and Golder and his sister-in-law. He telephoned to Dr. Runcie, who came right over. Then he sent for Mr. Bedell because Mrs. Bailey had spoken of knowing him.

"Afterward my mother-in-law came into the room," he continued. "She was all fussed up. I did not see my wife. She was not in the office at all. I'm not sure whether I saw her in the reception room. I do not remember seeing her until after the shooting, with the family, either in her room or my sister-in-law's."

Dr. Carman said that Mrs. Bailey lived about two minutes after she was shot. He described the removal of the bullet, which had passed from Mrs. Bailey's back to a point under the skin of the left breast. He showed and paled as the mangled bullet, which had struck a bone, was handed to him for identification.

"I last saw my wife before the shooting at the supper table," Dr. Carman said. "I do not know when she went upstairs. Mrs. Bailey was in my office from eight to ten minutes. I first heard about the dictograph day before yesterday when Mrs. Carman told me she had taken it out. I don't remember any comment she made on her action."

Lawyer Levy, representing Mrs. Carman, wanted to ask questions. District Attorney Smith protested that he had no standing in court. The doctor smoothed the matter over by telling Mr. Levy to submit questions in writing to be asked by the coroner.

Q. Who made the suggestion that Mrs. Carman tell you about the dictograph? A. I don't know. It was either Dr. Runcie, or Mrs. Powell, or Mrs. Carman.

Q. What did Mrs. Carman say? A. She only said she had put the machine in. I don't think I made any comment on it then.

Q. Did she say why she had put it in? A. She didn't say, but I knew why. It was because she wanted to hear what was going on in the office.

Q. Did she want to hear what you said, professionally, to your patients? A. She wanted to hear all that was going on.

RAPPED ON WINDOW THROUGH WHICH SHOT WAS FIRED.

Q. Do you remember that she ever before came to the window that was broken the night of the shooting? A. Yes; she rapped on that window six or seven weeks ago. It was in the evening, after dark.

Q. Who was in your office? A. A patient of mine—a nurse who lived in Bedford. Her name was Mrs. Behrens.

Q. Was anything said when Mrs. Carman rapped on the window? A. No. She came to the office door and rapped on it and said: "Let me in." I did so, and she came into the office with great dignity and said: "This is a nice piece of business for a married man and a married woman to be taking money."

Q. Had any money passed between you? A. Yes; shall I tell the story in my own way? Well, that evening, six or seven weeks ago, Mrs. Behrens came to me and said she owed me. She said, "You lent me $25 and I want to pay it back to you and borrow $50." I said to her: "I don't like your arithmetic." She said her boy was not working and she needed the money. I gave her the usual story about not having any too much.

myself, so I gave her $15. Then it was that Mrs. Carman rapped on the window.

"After that we talked a few minutes and Mrs. Behrens told me what a good friend I had been to her. She got up to go and I walked to the door with her. My wife said I kissed her on the cheek or forehead, but I don't remember it. Then my wife rapped on the door and came in. She demanded the money of the nurse. Mrs. Behrens asked: 'Shall I give it to her?' I said 'Yes,' and she counted out $15 and gave it to Mrs. Carman."

Q. Was there any slapping on that occasion? A. Yes. Mrs. Carman flung out her hand and struck the nurse in the face with the end of her fingers. (The doctor imitated the blow with his hand.)

Q. You are sure that the window Mrs. Carman rapped on was the same one that was broken the night of the shooting of Mrs. Bailey? A. Yes.

Q. What time in the evening did this incident with Mrs. Behrens occur? A. I should say about 8.30, but I cannot tell.

Q. Did you see Mrs. Carman go out that night, or do you know how she got to the window? A. No; there were no shades down that night—all was wide open.

WARNED HIS WIFE NOT TO INTERFERE WITH HIM AGAIN.

Q. You talked with her after that about the occurrence? A. Yes; I told her that if she ever came there and did that again, all would be off between her and me. That was the substance of what I said to her.

Q. From that time to the time of the shooting did you have any quarrel with your wife? A. No.

Q. You have often been out together to functions, have you not? A. Yes; last Saturday night we were together on Mr. Kennedy's yacht. No cross words had ever been spoken since she rapped on the window. We have been the best of friends.

Q. When your wife told you of the dictograph, did she tell you when it had been installed? A. Yes; the same day we went to Raven Rock with Mr. and Mrs. Southard, seven or eight weeks ago.

Q. Then the dictograph was put in soon after the occurrence with the nurse? A. Yes.

Q. What sleeping room have you occupied for the last seven weeks? A. The same one as my wife, the front room upstairs.

Q. On the day of the shooting were you in your office in the early morning? A. No; I went out bright and early on call.

Q. Was Mrs. Carman home that day? A. She went to the city on the 9 o'clock train, I think, with her mother and our little girl.

GOT BACK FROM NEW YORK AT 7 O'CLOCK.

Q. What time did she get back? A. On the 7 o'clock train, I think.

Q. How was she dressed? A. Well, I don't remember; it seems to be she was wearing the dress she has on to-day—a blue or black street dress.

Q. Do you own any firearms? A. Yes, a rifle and an automatic, blue-steel pistol. I don't know the calibre of the pistol, but it is a small one.

Q. Is it the same one you showed me the other night in the presence of the officer? A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever use it? A. No, but I tried to.

Q. Have you any other revolver? A. No, but I used to own some.

QUESTIONED ABOUT THE REVOLVER HE HAS OWNED.

The District Attorney then asked Dr. Carman about revolvers he might have owned in the past. The physician did not remember owning a .38-calibre Colt, but thought he had had a large "bull dog" revolver seven or eight years ago.

Q. On the night of the shooting, are you sure whether you saw Mrs. Carman immediately after the shooting? A. I think she was in the outer office shortly afterward, but not in the inner office.

Q. On the night of the shooting, did you call anybody on the telephone about midnight? A. I did not. Somebody called me up.

Q. On the day after the shooting, did you go to the Baileys? A. No, I did not.

Q. How long after the shooting did you go upstairs? A. About half an hour, I think. I met all of them (his family) up in the hall. My wife was up there. She was in a kimono.

Q. Did you have any talk with Mrs. Carman at that time? A. No, there was only general talk—we all talked together.

Q. Did you ask her if she had heard the shot? A. No; I did not ask any one; every one could hear it.

Summer Pirates Fat Man Condemned to Walk the Plank By Eleanor Schorer

The physician was then excused, and Archie Post of Freeport, a clerk, twenty years old, who was in the doctor's waiting room at the time of the shooting, was then called to the stand.

Post's testimony threw no light on the mystery, but was of importance in that it contradicted the testimony of George Golder, who followed him. Post said that the woman Golder took for Mrs. Carman was Mrs. Powell.

"I do not know as to that," she answered.

"Were you jealous of Mrs. Bailey?"

"Indeed, I was not."

"Did you ever have trouble in the doctor's office with a woman patient?"

"Never," was the reply. "There was some trouble in the office over a nurse. I cannot go into details, but if questioned on the witness stand I will tell everything without reserve."

"There are varying versions of your movements prior to the tragedy Tuesday evening," Mrs. Carman was told.

"I know it," she replied. "But there is no occasion for these varying stories. I came down from New York with my mother. I was tired and had a headache. I ate very little dinner and went upstairs and undressed in my room. When the trouble started downstairs I went down near to the door but didn't go in. I felt that something terrible had happened, and I felt weak and faint."

REFUSES TO DISCUSS STORY TOLD BY GOLDER.

"Have you heard of the statement of George Golder that he saw you on the porch before the shooting and saw you in the doctor's office fully dressed after the shooting?" asked the interviewer.

"I don't care to talk about that," was the reply. "There is nothing in his statements. I do not know the man."

Lawyer George M. Levy, speaking for Mrs. Carman after the interview, said the reason Mrs. Carman did not go into the doctor's office when she heard the commotion downstairs was because she had heard that a woman had been shot. She had a sinking of the heart, the lawyer said, and returned to her room.

District Attorney Smith said to-day that when he and Sheriff Pettit, Dr. Carman and Chief Lamb, enacted in pantomime the tragedy in the doctor's office yesterday a new point was brought out. The District Attorney stood outside the window pointing a pistol, Chief Lamb stood where Dr. Carman said Mrs. Bailey was standing when she was fired and Dr. Carman played the part he had played in the real murder.

The doctor, in illustrating the positions occupied by Mrs. Bailey and himself, placed his hand on Chief Lamb's shoulder. This action prompted a question from Sheriff Pettit.

"Did you have your hand on Mrs. Bailey's shoulder just before the shooting?" Dr. Carman was asked.

"When the window was shattered," he replied, "I had my hand on Mrs. Bailey's shoulder. I leaped back of the operating chair. She stood still, by the door."

Mr. Levy, counsel for Mrs. Carman and the Carman family ventured to-day to explain this point. He said it was the custom of Dr. Carman to put his hand on the shoulders of his patients. It was done in a reassuring way, the lawyer said, and had no significance in any case.

PERSON WHO SHOT COULD HAVE BEEN THE DOCTOR.

However, the statement of Dr. Carman made clear that the murderer, looking through the window into the office, saw Dr. Carman with his hand on Mrs. Bailey's shoulder.

The murderer aimed the pistol in the direction of the couple, but when Dr. Carman jumped to shelter the aim of the pistol did not change his movement. He got out of range. The murderer took deliberate aim at Mrs. Bailey and fired.

All the energies of the deputy sheriffs, constables and detectives are now bent upon finding the .32 calibre revolver with which the crime was committed. Two revolvers were found on Dr. Carman's premises. One was a .22 calibre automatic. The other was an old pistol which was kept in the garage. Neither had been used recently.

The search extended last night to cesspools on Dr. Carman's property and in the neighborhood. It is apparently the idea of the investigators that the revolver is to be found within a block of Dr. Carman's residence.

A special guard of policemen and constables has been placed about the Carman property. Automobiles are kept in readiness. The guards are under orders to follow any one leaving the house and arrest any person attempting to cross the county line.

The autopsy was performed in the Cornell undertaking shop by Drs. R. D. Grimmer and Howard M. Phelps of Hempstead, and Dr. William S. Runcie, a Freeport neighbor and friend of Dr. Carman. It was primarily for the purpose of determining the cause of death. This was quickly shown to be a bullet wound which ranged from a point below the right shoulder, through the body, severing the aorta.

Dr. Runcie and Phelps reported to the coroner that they believed that Mrs. Bailey had either recently undergone an operation or had been in a delicate condition. Dr. Runcie said that he did not believe this. To make sure of this phase of the case parts of the body were removed so that a more careful examination may be made in a laboratory.

Following her information detectives went last night to No. 275 East One Hundred and Forty-sixth street, where they found in an apartment indicated by Mrs. Hanson, Frances Fetz of No. 617 Courtlandt avenue, Norah McConnell of No. 336 St. Nicholas avenue and Corinne Hanson of No. 519 East 112nd street.

They were between seventeen and nineteen years old. The detectives then went to No. 55 Westchester avenue, Portchester, and captured up Francis, Massiotti, Errico Grasso and Emilia De Gray, 17 No. 17 Pike street, Springfield, Mass.

On another trip to the home of Anniello Carfaro, father of The Don, he was taken prisoner with The Don and Frederico and Rosina di Fiori of No. 69 Eldridge street.

The District Attorney believes that between the dictograph and the admissions the girls made he may be enabled to arrest many other members of a loose organization for trading in women which has been operating for years in the Bronx.

Crescenzo Carfaro, the terror of Bronx Italians, who call him "The Don" and remove their hats (by his order) when they speak to him, and seven men believed to be his lieutenants in various lawlessness, were locked in a big cell in the Bronx County Building to-day with a dictograph. From the latter which came over the wire to an interpreter working for Assistant District Attorney Seymour Mork, material was gained for their prosecution for living on the earnings of women. They are under $10,000 bail fixed by County Judge Gibbs.

Five women are also in custody as material witnesses, under $500 bail, which will be increased for fear some one may secure their release and spirit them away. Only one of them, Della Neely Hanson, a young widow, maintains that she was kept a prisoner by members of Carfaro's band. The others would not have run away from the rooms the men provided for them if they could, they said; their only complaint was that they were not allowed to keep any of their earnings.

From the dictograph, Mr. Mork learned that The Don distrusts his friends. He told them he could easily furnish $10,000 bail himself, but that he thought it best to remain in jail and keep an eye on them. He followed this decision in spite of protests from the rest, including his father, Anniello, and his brother, Frederico.

The Don has a feed and provision store at No. 251 East One Hundred and Fifty-second street. Mr. Mork has for weeks been collecting evidence to charge him with extortion as the head of the artichoke trust. Peddlers who did not buy from him, it is said, were assaulted; their wares were sprinkled with kerosene and their carts were overturned. Sickness and death afflicted the horses of those who did not buy their feed of The Don. It was charged.

Mrs. Hanson was found Tuesday night in a house in One Hundred and Fifty-fourth street by a city marshal who had gone there to post an eviction notice. She was almost without clothing and half starved. She was bruised as from many beatings. She told a story of having come here from Bridgeport in May and being drugged and deserted by the first man with whom she made an acquaintance on the street. While she was still dazed she said she was taken in charge by two men, who compelled her to live in various houses in the Bronx and abandoned her when she could no longer stand it.

SEND HIS ADDRESS?

Mr. Johns Has Name but Not Number of Family Wife Is Visiting.

Now, somebody be a good fellow and help out E. B. Johns, Washington correspondent of the Army and Navy Journal, who is anxious to spend the Fourth with his wife in New York. He will be at the Mayor's office to-day to receive your message.

Mrs. Johns came to New York to visit some friends named Smith and gave her husband the name and address so he could come over and spend the holiday with her. When he got ready yesterday to start to New York he discovered he had lost his wife's memorandum. All he could remember was that the family who was visiting was named Smith.

Being a newspaper man himself, he knew his only hope was the press, so the Washington boys sent out the story with a request that Mr. Johns, or the family of Smiths who is visiting, notify him at the Mayor's office to-day. Otherwise he will be a very busy man, for there are about 4,032 Smiths, Smythes and allied branches in the Manhattan directory and almost as many in Brooklyn, and he could hardly call at the home of each in search of his spouse.
